

ROGER EBBAGE

Roger Ebbage holds an interdisciplinary Master of Arts degree in Environmental Studies/Industrial Arts with a Passive Solar Design Emphasis.

He is an Association of Energy Engineers Certified Energy Manager, a California Certified Energy Auditor, a Bonneville Power Administration Certified Energy Auditor/Inspector, and a general building contractor. He was recently was selected as the “Energy Manager of the Year” by the National Association of Professional Energy Managers and “Innovator of the Year” by the Community College League for Innovation.

Roger Ebbage has been the Energy Management Program Coordinator at Lane Community College in Eugene, Oregon, since 1992 and has made the program a national model for energy education. After developing and piloting several energy-efficiency workshops in the residential and commercial sectors, Mr. Ebbage founded and serves as Director of the Northwest Energy Education Institute.